Editor's Notes:

Well, I was thrilled a couple of days ago when I looked at my weather app on my phone and saw a 10-day string of bright yellow suns! Not a single rain cloud with a lightning bolt to be seen. Looks like Model A weather to me.

So get out there and take advantage, everyone. Our May tour is to see the collection of Rick and Liz Horne on May 20th, and that will be followed at the end of the month with the Memorial Day Parade in Senoia on the 25th.

Check these out, and much more, in this month's edition.

Notes from Our Director

Those gas station encounters, we all have them, some can be really interesting. The usual "How fast will it go" and "How much did it cost" or "Does it burn much gas" questions can be anticipated. We all enjoy talking about our cars and the hobby so we usually take time to talk to people. A while back I had a gas station encounter that was special to me. A nice middle aged lady walked up and asked me if I would do her a favor. I said "I will if I can". She told me it was her Dad's 95th birthday and she was on her way to his party. He married his sweetheart on his birthday and they were celebrating 72 years of marriage as well as his birthday. She asked if I would drive the Model A to the party and let her Dad see it, he loves old cars and it will make his day she said. We were two miles from the party and I thought, she doesn't look like a serial killer, so why not?

I followed her to the party and there were at least 50 people there from ages 5 to 95. The anniversary couple spent a while walking around the Model A and sharing Model A stories. They sat in the car for about 30 minutes and got pictures done. I could tell that they enjoyed the car and appreciated me bringing it. I felt good about spending the time with them on the way home. I haven't seen the lady at the gas station again, I haven't seen the old couple either. I guess they probably think about that afternoon once and a while. I think about it every time I go to that gas station. These old cars are fun and sometimes kind of special to people besides us. Maybe somebody will bring one to my 95th birthday if I live that long!

Georgia's Historic Capitals Tour

April 15th and 16th, 2015

By Jim Wingo

On a rainy morning, three cars from Southside A's left Peachtree City, Georgia, to explore the history of Georgia. Ray and Teri Besch, Tom Miller, Dick Carne and Jim Wingo drove the tour. The aim was to visit two historic state capitals, Milledgeville and Louisville, Georgia, by following the general route of General Sherman's March to the Sea.

While the rain was off and on it wasn't enough to dampen the enthusiasm for making what turned out to be an enjoyable and entertaining and educational journey of 388 miles. The second day of the tour was cool and pleasant with no rain.

Our first stop was Milledgeville, for a short lunch break and walk of historic district; this is home to the old state capitol building built in 1807 and now part of the Georgia Military Academy. We had a leisurely lunch at the "Old Brick" restaurant followed by a coffee at the "Blackbird" next door.

Historic Downtown District, Milledgeville

Next stop was Sandersville, and a personal tour of The Brown House, known during the time of the Civil War as "Woodlawn Terrance". Nathan Haynes built the house about 1850. It as was completely restored by the Washington County Historical Society and opened in 1999. The house was used by General Sherman as his headquarters. There are many interesting period pieces and mementoes from the Civil War era displayed. Including the couch where General Sherman rested.

Brown House, Built 1850, Sandersville, GA

We drove the short distance back to Milledgeville to spend the night before the final leg of our trip to Louisville

The next day we were off to Louisville and the weather had cleared for our short drive there.

Louisville was laid out in 1786 as the prospective state capital. Georgia became a state in 1788. Savannah had served as the colonial capital; but it was considered too far from the center of the growing state. Louisville was named for Louis XVI, who was still the King of France and had aided the Continentals during the successful American Revolution.

Development of the city began later, and its state government buildings were completed in 1795. The city of Louisville served as the state capital of Georgia from 1796 to 1806.

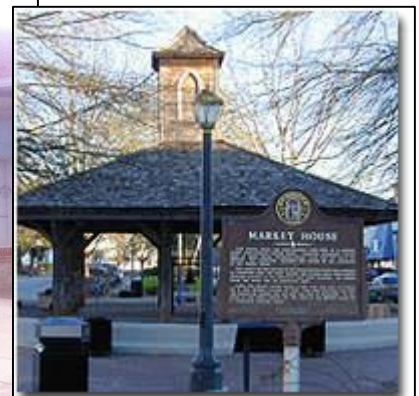

We visited a Revolutionary Cemetery where a number of Georgia patriots are buried. Among these Brigadier General James Gunn, (March 13, 1753 – July 30, 1801) was a delegate to the Continental Congress and United States Senate for Georgia.

Picture of the cars from second story of the Brown House Museum.

Cars parked near Old Capitol Building, Louisville, GA

Oldest Marketplace in Georgia

The Jefferson County courthouse, built in 1904, stands on the site of Georgia's first permanent capitol building in Louisville. The original capitol building was lost to fire during the infamous Yazoo Land Fraud.

After walking Louisville and having lunch at the local Bistro we headed to our next stop just outside of Sparta. The Rock Hawk Effigy and Trails has a 12,000-year history. There the group walked the peaceful trail to the effigy. The area is part of the old Okfuskee Trail that connected Charleston, SC with the Mississippi River. The path to the effigy had a very nice history of Georgia on placards from pre-history to modern times.

We left for home and we enjoyed our ride back through the farmlands of Eastern Georgia. A fun time was had by all.

Model A Museum News

Model A Ford Foundation: Latest Museum Improvements

The Model A Ford Museum is moving into a new phase of its existence. The museum has matured enough to begin exchanging some of the original exhibits for new vehicles and new displays. For example, in recent months the complete cutaway chassis has been removed and temporarily replaced by cutaway components. Also a large graphic has been installed behind the early "AR" Tudor (Model A #1209). The huge wall graphic, pictured here, shows the photo taken when the Model A was introduced in Chicago for the first time. The large photo shows great detail and provides an insight into the excitement among the welcoming throngs that gathered around the country to get a view of The New Ford. It is possible that #1209 was the subject of such a gathering when it first arrived at the dealership where it was sold. This very early Tudor sedan was donated by Archie Jackson of Galena, Illinois.

Nearby is a display of the many variations of the Model A original equipment carburetors, made by Zenith, Holley and Ford Corporations. The display includes an example of many of the carburetors used during the four-year production run of the Model A Ford. The manufacturers made slight variations in the internal and external components creating many slightly different examples. Most of the variations are on display in the three-sided display shown here. Each side of the display has a graphic showing some aspect of the history, operation and design of the carburetors used on the Model A Ford. The carburetor collection was donated by Dave and Marcy Cella of L'Anse, Michigan.

In the planning stages is an interactive Starting Display which will allow visitors to experience the steps needed to get a Model A started as compared to the modern twist of a key, or push of a button. The display will incorporate an actual Model A cowl, steering wheel with spark advance and throttle levers, and floorboard pedals, gearshift and emergency brake levers. If a visitor accomplishes the various steps in the right sequence, there will be appropriate responses from the display such as the sound of the starter engaging, and the sound of the engine starting. The large components have been obtained, but many of the components have yet to be secured. It is anticipated that many of the components will be donated by the Model A community.

Model A Day at The Gilmore Museum will take place on September 19, 2015.
Mark your calendars now to come and see the new displays, including the above items.

Our partnership with the Henry Ford Heritage Association is exciting and we welcome your participation in the Model A Ford Museum. ## Mother-Daughter Dressing, Circa 1930

This month, in honor of Mother's Day, I thought it would be fun to feature a style that was a part of my girlhood, namely Mother-Daughter dresses, and to see if this phenomenon existed during the Model A Era. In searching for illustrations and information what I found were many examples primarily from the '50s. I think that was the apex of this simple pleasure. What I could not find, however, were examples from our era.

What I did find was that adolescent girls clothing basically mimicked that of their mothers, whereas younger toddlers had dresses and playsuits decidedly youngster with a style.

But all was not lost; I did come across the Simplicity pattern shown here, with a jumper/dress ensemble for both adult women and teenage girls. In this example, we see the same outfit done in different fabrics, but retaining the similarity in the look for mom and daughter.

The other example featured here is for knickers. This was a popular style for the "motor tourist," hikers and campers, as well as teens who could enjoy the comfort of knickers for a bike ride. We could certainly see a mother and daughter donning their matching outdoor wear and piling into the Model A for a drive to local park for a hike and a picnic.

HAPPY MOTHER'S DAY!

Have you ever seen THE BILTMORE, in Ashville, NC, decorated for Christmas?

Well, Dick and Jason Carne are formulating a plan to take a Model A tour over the weekend before Thanksgiving to do just that. Plans are only in the early stages, but the dates are November 21-23. Stay tuned for more information.

Balancing Model 'A' Wheel/Tire Assemblies

Jim Johnston

When it comes to balancing the tires on our Model A's the conventional way (installing wheel weights), most of us have a 'go to' tire store where we are satisfied with the end result. This method has been proven over the years as a reliable and efficient way to accomplish this task. There is a small downside to this method as it applies to the Antique Car and the Street Rod communities, and that is the weights used detract from the esthetics of our wheels.

There is another way to balance wheels that was originally developed for the trucking and RV industry. This method uses 'balance beads' installed in the tire, or inner tube, in the case of our Model A's. These high-density ceramic beads, when installed, continuously balance your tires as you drive. The beads are distributed via centrifugal force to counter balance the imbalance in the tire/wheel.

I had wanted to try this method for some time, and as our Tudor was in need of new tires I decided to give it a try. There are several manufacturers of these beads, the most popular probably being Dyna Bead, to the point that the term 'DynaBeads' has become synonymous with balance beads. I ordered the Wheel Balancing Beads from Snyder's ($31.75) for the four wheel kit. These beads are manufactured by, and named, 'Counteract'.

Contents of the kit - 1 balance kit for each wheel, and the installation bottle.

Contents of each individual kit – beads, valve core, and valve cap.

The instructions suggest using a 9/64" drill bit to slightly widen the opening in the valve stem. I did this prior to installing the tube in the new tires.

I mounted up the new Firestone's, and although my old tubes were serviceable, I went with new tubes sourced from Bratton's. I let them sit overnight to insure there were no leaks from a pinched tube. Installation is pretty straight forward. The tire is deflated, the valve core removed, and with the valve stem at the bottom, the beads are installed using the furnished bottle and tube. (see photo).

The valve core is reinstalled and the tire is inflated to the desired pressure. Ready for a road test!

My initial impression is good – no feedback through the steering wheel or my backside to indicate any tire/wheel imbalance at speeds up to 50mph.

Second thoughts: I typically do a lot pre fitting and fiddling when I do something new – just trying to prevent the ‘Oh S... I wish I had thought of that before’. The instructions recommend the use of the included valve core and cap. When I enlarged the hole in the valve stem to 9/64" the valve cores provided leaked when the tube was inflated. The valve cores that came with the tubes worked fine so I used them. If I had it to do again I would have tried to install the beads before enlarging the valve stem as the stem measured 1/8" (8/64). I don't know if the 1/64 made that big of a difference, and I would have been able to use the furnished valve cores.
